Also, this method is the only one that I am aware of, so I might be missing out some very important step. Pathology of ovarian cancer. Ovarian cancer is the fourth most common malignancy in women. Primary carcinomas are categorized by morphology into serous, mucinous, endometrioid, clear cell, Brenner tumor, and undifferentiated tumor. There are no specific prognostic or predictive markers for ovarian cancer. Prognostic factors are based on clinical stage, histologic type, and residual disease. The major prognostic variable is residual disease after primary surgery. Most primary carcinomas are sensitive to platinum-based regimens. Residual disease after primary surgery is the most important prognostic variable. Women with no residual disease after primary surgery have a survival rate of 85% at 5 years. Forty to 50% of women with residual disease have a 5-year survival rate of 20 to 40%. Patients with advanced stage disease, particularly those with distant metastasis, have a 5-year survival rate of less than 10%. Secondary carcinomas are categorized by their origin in the ovary into germ cell tumors, sex cord-stromal tumors, and metastasizing tumors.
